LOGAN MAXWELL HAGEGE-CHANGING LIGHT-ONE MAN SHOW

Sep. 01 - Sep. 14, 2014

ARTIST RECEPTION: SEPTEMBER 13, 4-7PM

With approximately 20 new paintings, the American Southwest comes to life in a series of angular images that capture the spare beauty of an arid landscape and of an ancient and enduring Native American culture shaped by the extremes of its environment.

Hagege's interest and ability in fine art were evident early on. Traditionally trained in a local Los Angeles classic atelier program, his studies involved spending more than six hours per day drawing and painting live models. Hagege also studied privately with Steve Huston and Joseph Mendez.

Inspiration for his subjects began at an early age with visits to his grandmother who lived in the California desert. Extensive travels and extended stays in various landscapes in the American Southwest also contributed to his repertoire of subjects. Hagege's evolution from landscape to figure and now a combination of both was a natural progression in his art.

Hagege is in the permanent collection of the Autry Museum, Briscoe Western Art Museum, Booth Western Art Museum, the Bone Creek Museum of Agrarian Art, and The National Cowboy & Western Heritage Museum. Most recently he received the Gene Autry Memorial Award for the best group of paintings at the 2014 Masters of the American West Exhibition and Sale at the Autry National Center in Los Angeles.

Scott's background as an illustrator, botanical researcher and biologist have served her well in conveying the drama and spirit of wildlife, both African and North American. Her meticulous illustration work is melded with an expressive use of brushwork and reflected light. Acclaimed for her dynamic and bold oil paintings as well as exquisitely detailed pencil drawings, she is able to convey a sense of first hand experience while capturing an intimate understanding of the wild country she knows so well. An artist reception takes place September 13th from 4-7pm.
